However, despite the aggressive strategic attacks played by the opponent, COT still took the lead when Klient Daquiaro, with his dedication and fiery kicks committed another goal that lead them to the golden cup.

"We prepare first our mental ability and our strength, for us to be conditioned and be ready for the game," said Bernard Basas from COT when asked about their preparations.

Basas added that with the help of their coach, effective teamwork, and trust with the Lord, they were able to take the lead.

"As a player, respect among other player is the best weapon an athlete has. We learn from our mistakes and this leads us to be the best," Basas said. •

Clear paths ahead

Each participating team in this year's Sports, Culture and the Arts Festival staged a sterling performance in their pitch to represent the university in the regional stages come November and December in Eastern Samar State University. With this, it is with quite high hopes that during the regional competitions, EVSU will, if not emerge at the top, put up a good fight for the nine other competing State Universities and Colleges.

This confidence may be attributed to the fact that the main platform for selecting the best representatives for the university has been resurrected after two years of being on hold due to considerations in budget and in hopes of minimizing the time deducted for academic endeavors. Moreover, the participants were more motivated to really give it their all after the administrators approved the incentives program for students who will represent the university in various competitions in addition to the expanded roster of activities in which students may show-off their skills outside the four corners of the classroom. Perhaps, it is already safe to say that the efforts to truly engage students are paying off.

Although there are still hitches in the execution of such endeavors, it is not to say that these will yet be another proverbial concern among students. One of which is keeping the records of the students up to date. Medical records, grades and unit counts are still major issues that student-athletes still face when vying for a spot to

“I always thought that I was in a constant search of people and things and groups.”

This week was one hell of a ride. And it's just the beginning.

Being able to find people who understand was just a dream for me. I always dream of being part of a group where people see things beyond the superficial linings of the dictates of society on gender, race, age and even religion. Every day, I get really excited to go home after school because I then, I can go back to dreaming the world I want and would belong in.

I always thought that I was in a constant search of people and things and groups. But soon I realized that all I wanted was belongingness and comfortability. I always wanted to belong. I wanted to be noticed, my works, my contributions, me. Thankfully, dreams do come true. I finally found the place where I can be who I am. I finally found the people who really see me. I finally found them - the pub.

This year's Sports, Culture and the Arts Festival was a great opportunity for me to really know the members of the pub and to really prove myself, that I deserve to be here. We were like in a freak road trip.

During the ride, we experienced road blocks and was shaken by strong gusts of wind. We had sleepless nights. We had arguments with each other. But we did not let these things be the hindrance to do our duties represent the university. Maybe it would be a good idea to have a mandatory medical exam every beginning of the school year. Also, making sure that grades are already complete by the start of every semester will really ease the concerns on disqualifications and a stricter policy on and responsibilities as the students' publication. Instead, we made these as our inspiration to do more and perform better in our assigned tasks.

This week was one hell of a ride and I know it's just the beginning for we are still travelling the highway to the Emerald City of fulfilled purposes. We will be taking this path with just our pen and intellect as weapons. We will live our lives as if it is every second is our last. We will lie on each other's shoulders and just enjoy the ride. I know we will be taking one step at a time but I know we will still get there. We will surely achieve our hearts' greatest desires. You might be wondering why I'm so freaking sure about the things I just wrote. Trust me, I know. We got you, and I got them. • school representation will do us all good.

If the university continues to introduce and improve the programs intended to holistically develop the students, it is certain that the institution will have a more solid foothold on securing the top spots in any endeavor that the university will venture into. •
